

The book was found

The Man Who Invented Fidel: Castro, Cuba, And Herbert L. Matthews Of The New York Times

Synopsis

In 1957, Herbert L. Matthews of the New York Times, then considered one of the premiere foreign correspondents of his time, tracked down Fidel Castro in Cuba's Sierra Maestra mountains and returned with what was considered the scoop of the century. His heroic portrayal of Castro, who was then believed dead, had a powerful effect on American perceptions of Cuba, both in and out of the government, and profoundly influenced the fall of the Batista regime. When Castro emerged as a Soviet-backed dictator, Matthews became a scapegoat; his paper turned on him, his career foundered, and he was accused of betraying his country. In this fascinating book, New York Times reporter DePalma investigates the Matthews case to reveal how it contains the story not just of one newspaperman but of an age, not just how Castro came to power but how America determines who its enemies are. He re-creates the atmosphere of revolutionary Cuba and Cold War America, and clarifies the facts of Castro's ascension and political evolution from the many myths that have sprung up around them. Through a dramatic, ironic, in ways tragic story, The Man Who Invented Fidel offers provocative insights into Cuban politics, the Cuban-American relationship, and the many difficult balancing acts of responsible journalism.

Book Information

Hardcover: 328 pages

Publisher: PublicAffairs; Annotated edition edition (April 24, 2006)

Language: English

ISBN-10: 1586483323

ISBN-13: 978-1586483326

Product Dimensions: 9.2 x 6.5 x 1.1 inches

Shipping Weight: 1.4 pounds

Average Customer Review: 3.6 out of 5 stars 18 customer reviews

Best Sellers Rank: #561,142 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #173 in Books > History > Americas > Caribbean & West Indies > Cuba #930 in Books > Biographies & Memoirs > Professionals & Academics > Journalists #14846 in Books > History > Military

Customer Reviews

In 1957, Herbert L. Matthews, a veteran foreign correspondent for the New York Times, trekked into the rugged Sierra Maestra in southeastern Cuba. There he interviewed a young lawyer, Fidel Castro, who had landed in Cuba several months earlier with the intention of waging guerrilla warfare to overthrow the Batista regime. Cuban government officials had claimed that Castro was dead and that the rebels had been obliterated. But Matthews' interview confirmed that Castro and his movement survived. Furthermore, Matthews conveyed Castro's plans for a democratic, non-Communist revolution, which earned him the sympathy of many Americans from both political parties. When Castro's revolution quickly turned hard left, Matthews was condemned as either an apologist for Castro or a naive dupe who had served the interests of international communism. DePalma, also a New York Times correspondent, chronicles the career of Matthews and dispels many of the myths surrounding his interviews with Castro and his subsequent reporting on the Cuban revolution. This is an interesting and often surprising piece of investigative journalism. Jay FreemanCopyright © American Library Association. All rights reserved

"a riveting, illuminating and troubling work of reportage and history." -- Yukon News, January 10, 2007

While many will buy this book to learn about Cuba and Castro, I think its greater value will be for those interested in journalism. How close can a reporter be to his or her source before bias surely intrudes? When does a reporter's decided notions of what ought to happen, prevent even-handed and clear reporting? How much backing--or control-- should be given an experienced reporter by a newspaper's editors? To me, the story of Herbert L. Matthews is of current interest not because of what happened with Castro over fifty years ago--but of how it informs today's debate over current journalistic standards at The New York Times and other major media outlets.

DePalma, Anthony 2006 The Man Who Invented Fidel: Castro, Cuba, and Herbert L. Matthews of The New York Times. Public Affairs (Perseus), Cambridge MA ISBN-10 1586483323, ISBN-13 978-1586483326 This book is a cornucopia of factual information rarely found in other English language studies on Cuban matters. The significance of Ruby Phillips a reporter far more experienced and attuned to the Cuban circumstance that Matthews is well described. In my view DePalma still accepts far too readily some of the nonsense on the repression of the country folk "Los Montunos" in the Sierra; apparently the author did not fully realize these mountain peoples had considerable legal and constitutional protection; which gave them access to lawyers such as Manuel R. Penabaz Tobio. DePalma falls into the common error of labeling the Sierra Maestra inhabitants as "peasants," which is not an appropriate term for the once mounted and armed inhabitants of the area. However, to one has to give the author great credit for his mention of the background of Eutimio Guerra (pages 33 and 34 but apparently not included in the index); which is more than most give to this AutÃ©ntico Party agrarian reform activist. Still the author accepts, without caveats, the Castro version of events which were used to justify Guerra's execution. Pages 83-84 tell how Celia prepared the illusion of a potent and far more numerous guerrilla forces for Matthews visit. Such a careful function, plus her role as armed guerrilla leader before Castro landed, and her ability to override or direct Castro in the mountains (described in other sources) seems far more consistent with a minder role, than merely that of a woman in love as she is often portrayed. On page 265 for example the author, unlike many academics and other Castro apologists, DePalma calls it close to reality e .g. "... For decades, all but the most radical works about Castro have essentially balanced his idealism and uncanny ability to survive against the ruthlessness of his dictatorship. To people everywhere in the ..." In summary balance this is an excellent book full of useful information and should be read by all those interested in Cuba and especially in the process of corruption of reporters which turns them into "Agents of Influence."

In this book we gain a semi-sympathetic portrait of an old dinosaur print media journalist who was NOT fair, not balanced who himself decided to "puff" up Castro.Others have noted how Castro "used" Matthews. To wit while in the tent with Matthews Castro had the same formation of men march around them repeatedly, to create the impression of a battalion instead of a platoon or company.Castro came along at a time when for the first time ever the media could create and appoint a heroic idol figure. The image captivated just enough folks so that inquiry into and analysis of policy, ideology was deemed un-necessary. Castro appealed to the long-suffering Cuban hopes for change.As to whether turning Cuba into a Cold War Soviet satellite/missile base was the plan from the git go? Who can really say? I think as with the current president there was a lot of "make it up as you go along" improvisation by the Castro brothers [although Raul appears to be far more sadistic, brutal and at the same time less ideological than el hermano grande] Many who worked so hard to bring Fidel to power werent communists: Raul Chibas and Huber Matos come to mind.To counter-balance this book make sure you read "Against All Hope" by Valladares and "Waiting for Snow in Havana" by Carlos Eire.In modern day journalism I'm sure ea and every statemt made by a Castro would be "fact-checked" by another writer who would have been detailed to go along with the Batista forces. No time since has any overseas writer been so willing to let statements go unexamined.

Very interesting.Herbert Matthews is now an obscure figure in history about whom much needs to be told.

Download to continue reading...

The Man Who Invented Fidel: Castro, Cuba, and Herbert L. Matthews of The New York Times
Cuba: Explore Cuba. The best of Havana, Varadero and Viñales. (Cuba Travel Guide, Cuba Night Life, Cuban Cigars, Cuba Embargo, Cuban Cuisine) Cuba Travel Guide: 101 Coolest Things to Do in Cuba (Budget Travel Cuba, Havana Travel Guide, Backpacking Cuba, Travel to Cuba) The New York Times Guide to New York City Restaurants 2002 (New York Times Guide to Restaurants in New York City) The Cuba Wars: Fidel Castro, the United States, and the Next Revolution Fidel Castro's Cuba (Dictatorships) The New York Times Monday Through Friday Easy to Tough Crossword Puzzles: 50 Puzzles from the Pages of The New York Times (New York Times Crossword Puzzles) The New York Times Wonderful Wednesday Crosswords: 50 Medium-Level Puzzles from the Pages of The New York Times (The New York Times Smart Puzzles) The New York Times Smart Sunday Crosswords Volume 6: 50 Sunday Puzzles from the Pages of The New York Times (The New York Times Crossword Puzzles) The New York Times Large-Print Stay Sharp Crosswords: 120 Large-Print Easy to Hard Puzzles from the Pages of The New York Times (New York Times Crossword Collections) The New York Times Sunday Crossword Omnibus Volume 9: 200 World-Famous Sunday Puzzles from the Pages of The New York Times (New York Times Sunday Crosswords Omnibus) The New York Times Best of Thursday Crosswords: 75 of Your Favorite Tricky Thursday Puzzles from The New York Times (The New York Times Crossword Puzzles) The New York Times Acrostic Puzzles Volume 9: 50 Challenging Acrostics from the Pages of The New York Times (New York Times Acrostic Crosswords) Cuba: 101 Awesome Things You Must Do in Cuba.: Cuba Travel Guide to the Best of Everything: Havana, Salsa Music, Mojitos and so much more. The True ... All You Need To Know About the Cuba. New York City Travel Guide: 101 Coolest Things to Do in New York City (New York Travel Guide, NYC Travel Guide, Travel to NYC, Budget Travel New York, Backpacking New York) Hidden Cuba: A Photojournalist's Unauthorized Journey to Cuba to Capture Daily Life: 50 Years After Castro's Revolution History Will Absolve Me: Fidel Castro: Life and Legacy (Kindle Single) Who Was Fidel Castro? The Double Life of Fidel Castro: My 17 Years as Personal Bodyguard to El Lider Maximo The Real Fidel Castro

Contact Us

DMCA

Privacy

FAQ & Help