Manaal is a Muslim-American born and raised in Southern California. She attended the University of Southern California for her Bachelor's Degree, and has always been passionate about writing. Being a mother of two girls, Manaal always sought children's books that were beautifully illustrated, fun to read and helped build a Muslim identity. Because her daughter loved stories that rhymed the most, Manaal decided to write her own children's book about Allah that touched upon the questions her daughter had. This is Manaal's first children's book and she hopes to continue to write for the benefit of her girls and all other children on the fundamentals and beauty of what Islam truly teaches. From her studio in Saint-Petersburg, Russian artist Tanya specializes in both raster and vector illustration, while also working in watercolor, colored pencils and acrylic.

The One will for sure help us raise young believers by teaching them 18 out of the 99 names of Allah. That said the book is not preachy at all. The drawings of everything Allah created are cute and inviting throughout the book. My son cooed with delight at the illustrations. It was precious masha'Allah. Allah's Attributes are used in English so they can appeal to non-Muslims who believe in The One as well. It's at the end of The One that we get a summary of the 18 Attributes of Allah used through this rhyming read. And that's a good way to start teaching children about Islam without overwhelming them. I recommend it to all Muslim parents. There are also sprinkles of beautiful Quranic verses and one hadith on the rewards of learning all 99 names in The One. ~I received a free copy ~

In The One, first time children's author Manaal Jafrey-Razaque weaves Allah's Names and Attributes into a whimsical story which is sure to delight and capture children's imagination. The illustrations complement the story really nicely. This book will work well for parents seeking children's literature with Islamic themes, as well as mainstream audiences interested in Islam. This book would be a great addition to a unit on world religions in an elementary classroom.** disclosure: I received a free copy of the book for a review.

Excellent book for kids and young Muslims. It's a simple fun to read rhyming book written to instill the oneness of God in young hearts and to say one simple message: everything around us was created by him. The illustrations go very well with the book.

Everything about this book is so sweet and adorable, from the wording to the delightful illustrations.
