The Dating Trap: Helping Your Children Make Wise Choices In Their Relationships

Synopsis

Many Parents dread their children's dating years. Martha Ruppert writes specifically for parents who are guiding or preparing to guide their teens through the dating years. The author presents a dating alternative she calls 'relating without dating.' This practical manual also offers suggestions on how parents can become lovingly involved in the emotional, spiritual, and social lives of their children.

MARTHA RUPPERT is a graduate of Concordia University in River Forest, Illinois. She and her husband, Allen, are the parents of seven children, five of whom are still being schooled at home. Besides writing, Martha conducts workshops about teen relationships. She and her family live on a farm in rural Illinois.c.2000

I found this book very helpful for me to apply Biblical values to my everyday life and to try to follow God's prescription for living.

This book was so wonderful. Definitely inspired by a higher power. It not only helped me to understand the damage that has been caused in my own life by dating, but gave me information on how to prevent those things from happening with my children. I can't thank Ms Ruppert enough for speaking out boldly on this, not so popular, topic. I encourage others to read it and learn what true love is.

God's desire for young relationships is clearly presented in this Biblical and practical guide for parents. As a single young adult I found Martha's insight perceptive and her advice precious. I was glad to finally read about a more pure and wise way to handle my relationships. This book will challenge anyone seeking God's counsel on this important matter of the "guarded heart".
