My granddaughter was very excited to receive this book. She loves the series and the cartoons.

[This is based on the E-Book Version I received from the publisher through NetGalley. ]Marinette is a middle school student who one day learns she has the power to transform into the Superhero known as Ladybug. Along with her ally, a fellow superhero named Cat Noir, they use their powers to save Paris from the villain known as Hawk Moth, who seeks to steal their powers. This is another one of those pseudo-comics that take screenshots from a TV series and paste the dialogue over top. These kind of books are hard to review. On one hand, this book does what it sets out to do- tell the story of the television show in a comic book format (specifically episodes 10 through 12 of season 1). On the other hand, that's all it does. There isn't much more outside of that. However, to its credit this one does more than just put the screenshots in the same size box 6-8 times and call it good. This tries more for a legitimate comic feel, with different sized boxes and some overlayed on others. The screenshots they used are expressive and well chosen for the dialogue. However switching from the animated format to this static image book does have its problems. The action scenes are where this book fails in its execution. Not for lack of trying but simply because an animated medium tends to be able to take shortcuts in quick action scenes. Slow those down and put them into static images, it gets a bit confusing. And since the action scenes take up quite a bit of the story, its definitely a very big downfall of this book. I would recommend the television show before I would recommend this book. However, if you're a big fan of the TV show or have no access to the actual animation, this is your best bet. Kids who love the show would probably get the most enjoyment out of this.
