"...animals are grouped and illustrated in delightful and whimsical ways." - Atlanta Parent Swiss illustrator Barman presents a playful overview of the animal kingdom?

Adrienne Barman spent her childhood in the highlands of Southern Switzerland and obtained her graphics diploma at Lugano. In 2001 she moved to Geneva, where she worked for five years with the collective SO2 Design while also working with Le Courrier. She also enjoyed being close to wildlife there. Since 2007 she has devoted herself to illustrating for publishing and press.

This is a fun book. Sure, it is non traditional, but that's what makes it fun. It makes the children think about how animals are alike and not just which classification they belong to or where they live. It is well written and has some interesting thoughts. There are some less familiar animals and the children can look for further information. This is a book to make children think about things/ animals differently. If they want a textbook, they have those as well. This is strictly fun.

This is a great visual encyclopedia for younger children with charming but realistic illustrations and creative categories for the featured animals. My children enjoy the book not only for the scientific knowledge but also as a guide for artistic renderings of the various animals. The volume has a nice heft to it but is sized appropriately for smaller hands.

The illustrations are cute, but other than that this book has nothing else of substance. I wouldn't have bought it if I had seen inside.

This book is absolutely great!!! The illustrations are wonderful!

This is the second purchase of Creaturepedia....our grandson who is 6 wore out the first one!! It's a wonderful, wonderful book and the illustrations are beautiful! Highly recommend!

Very well done book, I just wish it had more information about the animals, but my son really liked it.

absolutely awesome book! arrived in perfect conditions too!

Something for both of my grandsons(5 & 2 1/2) to enjoy
